

Clinical Addictions Counseling Pre-licensure disclosure

The Clinical Addictions Counseling graduate program at Indiana Wesleyan University seeks to prepare the program graduate for licensure and service in the Clinical Addictions Counseling profession. Licensure procedures vary by state. The procedure in the state of Indiana is as follows:

To become a Licensed Clinical Addictions Counselor under Indiana State Licensure Law is a two-tiered process. Prior to entering an academic program the applicant must be able to clear a background check. Applicants can request a review to be eligible for licensure in the state of Indiana before entering a graduate program.

Graduate School Academic Course Work

The State of Indiana requires applicants to complete a master's program in Clinical Addictions Counseling or post graduate work that includes specific academic addictions course work, that meets Indiana state law. It is preferred in state law that the program be accredited by the National Addiction Studies Accreditation Commission (NASAC). Examination & Post Graduate Requirements

Up to three months before graduation of an eligible academic program, applicants can apply for licensure and have two years to satisfy post graduate requirements. The requirements consist of passing an exam and 200 hours of post graduate clinical supervision. Once an applicant provides the needed documentation and pays the fee, they can take and successfully pass the Master Addictions Counselor Exam (MAC), through the joint auspices of the National Association of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Counselors (NAADAC) and the National Board of Certified Counselors (NBCC)

After passing the national exam, individuals are awarded their Licensed Clinical Addictions Associate (LCACA) license. They will have two years to collect their clinical and supervision requirements needed for the Licensed Clinical Addictions Counselor (LCAC) license.
