

The 14th Annual Celebration of Scholarship Luncheon

The Territories of Science and Religion

Thursday, April 21, 2016, from 12:00-1:30 p.m.

Henry West Banquet Room

Our guest speaker for the 2016 Celebration of Scholarship Luncheon is Dr. Peter Harrison, the Director of the University of Queensland's Institute for Advanced Studies in the Humanities

Dr. Harrison is the recipient of the 2015 Aldersgate Prize, awarded by the John Wesley Honors College for his book, The Territories of Science and Religion.

IWU Faculty are invited to attend the luncheon, which will also celebrate faculty and student research accomplishments, including the Lilly research awards and the Outstanding Faculty Scholarship Award. Please RSVP by 5pm Friday, April 15, 2016, to honors.office@indwes.edu.

“The Territories of Science and Religion has the potential to alter the course of some of our most important cultural conversations. Harrison’s book is a highly accessible clarion call to think more reflectively and creatively about the ‘territories of science and religion.’ And the text equips its readers to navigate these territories with fresh maps: maps that illuminate more clearly the essential intersections and boundaries and, accordingly, the most constructive paths forward.”
