Administration & Leadership

The conception, strategic planning, implementation, and sustaining of numerous long-standing programs at local, regional, national and international levels. I have been privileged to work alongside many national and global business owners and leaders on various projects (see Devoe Report – “In the Shadow of Geniuses,” Leading Business by the Book, and “The Bible and Business,” [Chronicle Tribune 9.31.17]). A sample of projects includes the founding of JC Body Shop in 1981, the Night of Champions at Azusa Pacific University (late 1990s, 4,000-6,000 students annually to the present, perhaps the largest FCA event nationally), various IWU departments and programs, The Scriptorium: Center for Christian Antiquities (later absorbed by The Holy Land Experience, Orlando, FL, I think a million annual visitors), the restoration and programming use of Hampton Court Herefordshire (UK, a 183-room castle, now a destination walled garden spot), the co-founding and implementation of the Museum of the Bible (a $1 billion project). Most recently the strategic planning, structure and implementation of the Moody Center \(Northfield, MA – the campus includes numerous Victorian buildings). Key positions are listed below, chronologically:

- 1997-present: Indiana Wesleyan University. Held various administrative positions, and established numerous key offices and programs large and small (e.g., Digital IDs, Grants Office, Institutional Research Office, Honors College, Scholarship Council, Retention and Student Success Committee—in various forms). Honored to serve as the first University Professor in IWU's history, after serving as the Assistant Provost for Public Engagement. Wrote around $40 million in grants as well for university programs (mainly outside of duties). All of the above were joint efforts with colleagues and caffeine. Introduced IWU to Ron Blue (progenitor of our Ron Blue Institute, under Dr. Larry Lindsay's leadership), Bob Briner and Roaring Lambs, and the World Changer theme. Began the Student Success Committee—aided by Foundations of Excellence award and colleagues' support. Worked with the Provost's office to help found and lead the Lumen Research Institute (collaborating with Excelsia College). With Dr. Wright, helped conceive and launch Triangle Publishing.
- 2009-present: National Conversations Co-founder with Dr. David Wright (while he was Provost). This is an occasional series of irenic dialogues among top voices on key issues, broadcast internationally, including from the National Press Club. Sponsored by IWU, and individual events co-sponsored with others, e.g., Yale, WFYI/PBS, CTI and Sagamore Institute. See www.nationalconversations.com. The most recent one captures the highly esteemed, late Michael Cromartie.
- 2010-present: The Museum of the Bible, DC (MOTB). VP level—on strategic leadership team and attend board meetings. Helped from the ground floor to build it: one of first two leaders hired (only one of original hires left), and now over 200 employees and hundreds of consultants and affiliates. Founder and Executive Director of its Scholars Initiative—the research arm of the MOTB collections (appr. 40,000 ancient items and artifacts); also oversight of the Passages Lecture Series at the Vatican, Cuba, the UK and several in the U.S., and assisted with related exhibits and professional filming. In 2016, the name changed to the Museum of the Bible Scholars Initiative. Currently serving as Executive Director of Education, including the successful delivery of ($15m) Bible curriculum in numerous forms (high tech, and equivalent of

- 14, 200-page books). Museum opens Nov. 17, 2017, on time and on budget. I have recruited dozens of the world's top scholars, assisted with planning of building and programming development throughout. See articles in Triangle and Wesleyan World magazines, 2017. Among final reviewers of final exhibit materials. Sit on the leadership cabinet and ex-officio on the board (with prominent national leaders). Over 1,500 groups already booked to attend the museum.
- 2010-present: Christian Scholar's Review Associate Publisher, peer-reviewed journal (lifetime 20% acceptance rate, 2014, 8%); organized first public celebration and 40th anniversary book; institutional representative to the board, 1983-2010.
- 2013-present: Religion News Service Board member; this is the main international news service in this space, with headquarters at the National Press Club, DC (where I'm a long-time member). We have secured over $5m in external funding during my tenure.
- 2016-present: founding leadership team of the D.L. Moody Center, Northfield, MA—location of gorgeous Victorian campus Moody built, and his homestead. Around $10 million already secured for the Center (for educational and ministry purposes). This will be the fulcrum of numerous events, publications, and programs for evangelicals worldwide.
- 2012-14: The oversight of the Northfield campus vetting process—gifting of the Moody campus to a non-profit, assisting the Green family (Hobby Lobby). Vetted over 100 proposals, including financial audits and on-campus meetings.
- 2004-2011 Governor's Council for Community and Faith-Based Initiatives Board member, Indiana: Included two roundtable meetings at the White House.
- 2007-2011 Managing Board of Energize Central Indiana. Nine-county economic growth board sponsored by the Ball Foundation.
- 1998-2002 Heads Up Baseball Founding president: A community program that included nearly 400 players annually—founded to address the values-based needs in local sports (Marion, IN). Remained financially solvent until absorbed into Upward Sports (served as a volunteer throughout). We also built two dugouts on the IWU sports fields.
- 1996-1997 The Scriptorium: Center for Christian Antiquities. Co-founder of this private foundation that later became the center of The Holy Land Experience in Orlando, FL. During my two-year tenure (my commitment to the funder), the foundation had an intense research component, an educational department with far-reaching collaborations, a center in Hereford, England (castle), and an ongoing public seminar series (many dozens of events, forums and presentations, with invited plenaries for numerous publishing houses, institutions, etc.). We also implemented a major excavation in Wadi Natrun, Egypt, a major technological program, the building of a facility in Michigan, the purchase and retrofitting of a 183-room English castle for educational purposes, numerous media interactions, the purchase of significant historic artifacts (including the entire library of Eberhard Nestle from Cambridge and many of Spurgeon's papers). I committed two years to Mr. Van Kampen (now deceased), and after establishing the programs returned to the academy (IWU). See my recent article about this in the first Devoe Report.
- 1994-1996 The Pew Young Scholars Program, Azusa Pacific University. First Director: The program continues under a different name (Dr. Joe Bentz gave long-time leadership). AJ Anglin was Provost at the time.
- 1990-1996 Night of Champions in LA Co-Director (& co-developer): 4,000-6,000 attendees annually, 600 workers, yearlong leadership program); Dr. Terry Franson, Vice President for Student Development at Azusa Pacific is the founder (see references). This program still occurs annually, fully solvent, and is allegedly the largest annual event for Fellowship of Christian Athletes. During the last two years the numbers have been limited to 4,000.
- 1981-1985 J.C. Body Shop Founding Director of this youth program and center in Marion, Indiana under the auspices of College Wesleyan Church. Celebrated its 30th anniversary, fall 2011, and a new, State-of-the-art building on the Indiana Wesleyan University campus (under Darren Campbell's tenure as leader). See Straight Talk, "A Ministry Moment: J. C. Body Shop," p. 188.

Professional Research Interests

Strengthening U.S. education K-Graduate; Scholarship of teaching and learning; faculty development (scholarship and publication); student success; public intellectual thought engagement, and; Ancient Near East and the Bible.

I have consistently been inconsistent in my focus—that is, following five paths to publications. 1. The greater public (via local and international media outlets and trade books). 2. Discipline-specific journals and books—history (a wide variety of topics within this space). 3. Higher education—from research laden to general application. 4. Religious—from biblical curriculum and a variety of texts and chapters to personal reflections and devotionals. 5. Technologically engaging, including recent books and museum products.

Conferences and Exhibits

Co-directed the international conference, "The Bible as Book: The Manuscript Tradition," May 31-June 3, 1995, Hampton Court Herefordshire, England. Moderator. Plenary speaker, Il Prefetto, P. Leonard E. Boyle, O.P. Biblioteca Apostolica Vatican. (Pope John Paul II's Librarian at the time). Proceedings were published by The British Library in The Bible as Book: The Manuscript Tradition. I also co-directed the 1996 conference, which was co-sponsored by The British Library, Sir Anthony Kenny, Director. The north wing of the (old) British Library was closed for a manuscript and incunabula showing to begin the conference, and we were the guest scholars.

The Odyssey in Egypt: Interactive Curriculum: Co-author and co-developer of this interactive resource piloted by the Michigan West Ottawa School District (spring 1996) and selected by the 24 Hours in Cyberspace. This curriculum involved many notable consultants, e.g., Gawdat Gabra (Director of the Coptic Museum, Cairo), Steven Boggess (WebSite One and movie producer, LA), and Cindy Horness (Screen Editor, "Where in the World is Carmen San Diego.") The Odyssey curriculum was the precursor to the CyberDig curriculum (which covered the recovery studies of Christopher Columbus).

Museum of the Bible Exhibits: Assisted with various aspects of preparing and presenting the Green Collection exhibits, including Oklahoma City Museum of Art (around 60,000 attended); The Religious News Writers Association's National Conference, Baylor University, The Vatican Embassy, D.C., Wheaton College (IL), Union University (TN), and Liberty University. The major exhibit (Passages, around 400 items) went from OKC to other venues, including Atlanta (winter 2011-12), The Vatican City Rome (spring 2012, 2014) and various other cities. As our MOTB organization grew, my direct role with these has lessened significantly. A professional team of curators now handles all of these.

Comments about Engagements and Scholarship (Excerpts)

Jerry Pattengale has become a transformational leader in higher education, creating a new image and model for purpose-centered education.

Edward P. St. John

Algo D. Henderson Collegiate Professor of Education, University of Michigan

A great teacher and a great teacher of teachers, Jerry Pattengale is a true believer that teaching and learning can change lives, the lives of both students and teachers. In a world where it is easy to blame teachers, students or colleges for what education does not do, Jerry embraces teachers, students, and even colleges in possibilities. His enthusiasm reminds us all of what teaching and learning can rightly mean in the world.

Patrick E. White

President Emeritus, Wabash College

Jerry Pattengale writes thoughtfully and uses language carefully. He rewards his audience with a good read every time. (2015); The best writing of the bunch. Clever mixing of sports and politics. The writer demonstrated a deep knowledge of both topics (2016, 1st Place).

A pithy and powerful exploration of the notion of objectivity, which will be welcomed by all students of biblical history and interpretation.

I have witnessed first-hand how the practical applications in this fascinating little book [Why I Teach] can transform a campus. It's a short read with long-term possibilities!

Henry Smith
Former President and Chancellor, Indiana Wesleyan University

Dr. Jerry Pattengale shares his sage guidance and passion for teaching in this highly accessible, inspirational, and thoroughly enjoyable book [Why I Teach]. It is a must read for anyone who is committed to making a difference in the classroom and, ultimately, the lives of the college undergraduates that they teach.

I first contacted Jerry (by email) after reading one of his "Buck Creek Chronicles" articles in the Lafayette Journal & Courier last Christmas Eve. As a Buck Creek farm-boy myself (almost ten years older than Jerry) I was impressed with his memory of Buck Creek details. His response included a link to his articles; several of which I downloaded and began to read. Jerry's writings have made a big difference in my life since then, both from a business perspective and from a personal (Christian) perspective. After more than 20 years of managing both private and public manufacturing businesses for others, including several very-successful turnarounds, I moved back "home" to Indiana and bought my own small manufacturing company, which stayed small and struggling until 2003. Jerry's articles about the Life Wedge helped me to refocus my business with wonderful results: sales growing from a $400,000/year rate to a $2,400,000/year rate in little more than a year.

Dr. Jerry Pattengale served as a consultant to Lee University as we prepared a complex, institution-wide grant proposal resulting in a $2 million award. He was instrumental in focusing the planning committee on Lee's key issues and strengths as we developed the project. His skill as an objective reviewer was extremely valuable as we fine-tuned the proposal, and his extensive grant writing experience helped us to improve our proposal in a variety of areas, from content to formatting to budget preparation. Not only that, but Dr. Pattengale's accessibility (critical when using an out-of-town consultant) and easy-going style made working with him on the project a real pleasure.

Vanessa C. Hammond
Director of Grants, Lee University (TN)

Jerry Pattengale is a well-trained ancient historian who draws freely from his specialization to illustrate his major points in this booklet [A Brief Guide to Objective Inquiry], and he presents his case in an engaging, even sprightly, manner.

William C. Ringenberg, Ph.D.
Professor Emeritus, Taylor University (IN)

Dr. Pattengale's workshop on grant writing was one of the best that I have ever attended. I found this workshop uniquely useful for a number of reasons: Dr. Pattengale clearly showed the relationship between grantsmanship and scholarship, making the subject matter extremely relevant and interesting to faculty and staff. His presentation style and format made everyone feel confident and comfortable about the grant process and I was amazed at his ability to bring the best out of everyone so quickly and so easily. Among those who attended the workshop, there were people who had never attempted grant writing. Some of them are now beginning to write proposals. Not only that, I am noticing a new enthusiasm about grants on this campus that has become really contagious. Besides, as the Dean of Graduate Studies and Research at Texas A&M University-Commerce, the person responsible for research and grants, I found his exit interview and follow-up report absolutely invaluable.

Mathew Kanjirathinkal, Ph. D.
Former Dean of Graduate Studies and Research, Texas A&M University-Commerce

It's one of the best responses that I've seen to anything in this community. . . . There are a lot of people who talk about grants. Getting them and getting them consistently is different. It's like hitting a homerun. Jerry would be in the top one [percent] nationally.

Quote taken from The Chronicle Tribune (12/09/02)

Just wanted to send you a quick email and tell you how much I appreciated your class last year. While some of my peers have really struggled with their research and writing assignments, they come quite naturally for me. My legal writing prof recently asked me if I was a writing major in undergrad! I immediately told him no, but I mentioned this great history seminar class I took my senior year :) . . . Basically, I just wanted to encourage you and tell you that I attribute any writing skill that I may have to your class last year---one of the most beneficial classes for grad school. . . . One of my writing samples actually got me a job this summer clerking for a federal judge. Thanks for everything you do!

Reading Jerry Pattengale is my favorite form of therapy. It's cheaper than psychoanalysis—and a lot more fun.

John Wilson
Former Editor, Books and Culture

Jerry has a way of seeing life lessons through everyday life that others overlook. He does it in such a lighthearted way that you can't help but enjoy the journey. His book will cause your mind to think and your heart to smile.

Most golfers are way too serious, worrying about pausing on the backswing or yipping with the putter. Jerry Pattengale captures the fun side of golf, mixed in with some solid lessons of life and wisdom.

To many Hoosiers, Jerry Pattengale has become the Garrison Keillor of their beloved state. Take, read, smile, laugh and when done, leave Jerry's work on the doorstep of a hardened enemy (if need, I fear I can loan you one or two). You'll soon make a friend and experience a good measure of the Christmas joy reflected in these pages.
